Feasibility and risk

This section helps us to understand how you will successfully deliver your project.

We need to know your plans for managing the project, what your budget is and how you will respond to any risks or challenges.

You don't need to have managed a project before, but you need to be able to demonstrate that you have given consideration to how you will manage the project, the budget, and any risks/challenges, and that you or your project partners have the skills to ensure it is delivered successfully.

When we look at your answers to the questions in this section we will think about:

- whether the budget is appropriate for the scale and type of activity?
- how appropriate are the areas of income and spending?
- whether all items in the budget are relevant and reasonable [are fees or wages appropriate to the context? Have quotes for assets/equipment been appropriately researched for any purchases?]
- whether the activity is attracting income from other sources; - is any other income confirmed? If not, are your potential income sources realistic?
- if appropriate financial controls are in place - Do you or the people you're working with have the necessary skills to manage the budget?
- if the activity is realistic and well-planned, and if you have demonstrated that you or the people you are working with are able to deliver the project

Name: Breathe Arts Health Research

Main contact (if organisation): Jo Pelly

Email address: jo@breatheahr.org

Role in project: Programme manager at Guys and St Thomas, will curate the activities and give a rota, promote, and support. She has over 18 years of experience working in theatre access and education, designing and managing programmes for young people facing barriers to arts engagement. WHY BREATHE ARTS? They specialise in arts and health research and can support our evaluator collaboration. They also run a recognised and established hospital programme which is participant centred and co-creative. They have a close and established relationship with the hospital staff which supports the communication around patients's needs and preferences, as well as offers a useful feedback loop. They provide an engagement officer that is present at every session, introduces us to the staff and helps us make a plan based on individual ward's setup, current medical and special needs, energy levels, family visitors and so on. From the hospital's side, we are also joined by a play specialist which knows the patients and their families really well, can provide insight, and support all introductions and interactions. As Becky Harrison (Engagement and Support Officer, Breathe Arts) noted at one of the test visits: "A non-verbal child had a profound physical reaction to the music. A play specialist at Evelina children's hospital commented: "I think the music is really beneficial, especially for non-verbal patients as it provides a strong sensory experience"." Guillermo began working for Breathe Arts Health Research (BAHR) back in 2008 as an occasional performer in their hospital programmes when it was part of Guys and St Thomas Charity and was a Live Music Now artist. From 2013 he has been part of their regular Resident Performers team in Guys' and St Thomas' hospitals, as well as their lunchtime concert programmes. This involves weekly visits to different wards and units and a deep connection with the hospitals's culture.

Guillermo says, 'I have had a successful career as a Jazz/World music performer; specialising in Argentine Folk / Argentine Tango, singing with my band, Rioplatenses; one of the first bands to bring South American music to UK audiences (WOMAD, SouthBank centre, City of London Festival etc). I have facilitated in the community sector for WEA, Yorkshire Arts, Live Music Now, Breathe Easy, The Choir with No Name & many others & pioneered national research into choir singing & COPD with Sydney De Haan Dept. I have toured & performed with: - Gilad Atzmon's Orient House Ensemble (recorded the award-winning album, Musik) - Los Mareados & Tango Siempre - West-End musical Midnight Tango, ft. Vincent & Flavia. Arriving here in 2000, I took a MMus-Masters in Ethnomusicology (2005) at SOAS. Interested in the interface between improvisation & composition, I investigated proto-music & the linear trace through folkloric modalities. This led to my extensive study of vocal improvisation in Indian, Middle Eastern, African & Native North & South American music. Inspired by a performance by Bobby McFerrin, one of the world's leading vocal improv protagonists, I began experimenting with circlesong & am now a recognised Circlesong leader & have collaborated with Rhiannon (Bobby McFerrin's Voicestra), Joey Blake, Roger Treece & more. In 2019 I launched a collaborative vocal improv project, Anthropol: Songs of Humanity; a reimagining of pre-language music making, & explored vocal improv in duet with Jaka Skapin. Whilst performing together for a funded series of improvised movement & music workshop/performances for people with dementia & Alzheimers through Jewish Care, we pioneered virtual composition / improv techniques; which led to digital performance/Q & A's, at the Vocal Leadership Festival Rotterdam & Poplar Union Festival.'

He is interested in implementing the pedagogy with Live Music Now artists . WHY LMN? They have a diverse national network of experienced community musicians. They also have a strong research strand and can support the creation of the project outputs. They are interested in supporting the creation of a new improvisation based pedagogy that enables collaboration between musicians from different backgrounds. They are happy to test it as a module of Live Music in Care, understanding that we are sharing our own pedagogy in collaboration with them, aiming for a resource that can be used throughout the sector in the future. Guillermo has been a Live Music Now artist since 2003, having been one of the first non-classical musicians from a World music background to join the programme. After many years as a practitioner delivering performances and workshops in SEND schools, retirement homes, prisons and day care centres across the UK, Guillermo began working for LMN as a mentor, leading training programmes for their new artists and observing them in their practice, keeping a close relationship with the organisation and its goals.

Risks and challenges

What are the main risks and challenges to your project meeting its aims?
What will you do to manage these risks?

Up to 1500 characters

Risk:

Delivering in a care home where the residents stay the same, whilst also working in the children's hospital where there is a lot of change; this will test the flexibility of the approach.

Mitigation:

Research, review & formalisation of the pedagogy; ensuring a standard but bespoke approach to each environment; leaning into the experience of partners; following the approach of Live Music in Care & receiving guidance on pedagogy, following existing toolkits, exploring shared frameworks.

Risk: Safeguarding

-Physical - residents in care homes who are invited to contribute through singing, speaking & moving

-Emotional - interacting with child patients in families while they're experiencing a long hospital stay.

Mitigation:

-Jewish Care staff are in all sessions to support the residents & participate themselves

-Jewish Care is funding movement therapists to be present & specifically enable safe physical interaction for residents who move around the space

-Evelina Children's hospital, each visit begins by checking with ward managers to see which patients are participating

-interactions are supported by a play specialist working with the children & families daily, who understands their needs, & suggests ways of making music that are the most engaging

-participants always guide the intensity, direction & feel of the music created together.

Delivering the Outcomes

Your Project and the Outcomes

Our strategy sets out three outcomes; Creative People, Cultural Communities and A Creative and Cultural Country. We do not expect every project to address all three outcomes, but we do want projects to align to at least one and to set out in detail how particular components are being addressed.

You can read about our three outcomes here: <https://www.artscouncil.org.uk/outcomes-0>

When we look at your answers to the questions in this section, where relevant we will think about:

- How your project is supporting people at all stages of their lives to design, develop and increase their participation in high quality creative activities
- If your project focuses on children and young people:
 - If your project reaches families from a wide range of backgrounds
 - If you are widening and improving opportunities for children and young people to take part in creative activities outside schools
 - if your project is supporting children and young people to develop their creative skills and potential
- If you are working with communities to better understand and respond to their needs and interests, resulting in increased cultural engagement and the wide range of social benefits it brings
- If your project is exploring new types of creative practice, new forms of cultural content and new ways of reaching new and existing audiences and participants
- If you are collaborating with other cultural organisations and/or with the commercial creative industries and/or with further and higher education that focuses on innovation, research and development and training, especially in relation to the use of new technologies
- If your project is strengthening the international connections of cultural organisations and creative and cultural practitioners, including co-production and touring
- If your project is bringing world-class culture to audiences in England
- If your project helps to ensure people have opportunities to sustain their careers and fulfil their potential in the creative industries, especially those who are currently under-represented
- If your project is connecting people and places, nationally and internationally

How will your project contribute to the delivery of at least one of our Outcomes, including which, if any, of the Outcome components?

A Creative and Cultural Country: England's cultural sector is innovative, collaborative and international, Cultural Communities: Villages, towns and cities thrive through a collaborative approach to culture, Creative People: Everyone can develop and express creativity throughout their life

Please click the 'Save' button below after you have answered the question.

Creative people:

How will your project contribute to this outcome?

Up to 1500 characters

Collaborative vocal improvisation offers complete equity of access, & esp. works with ppl who are:

- non-verbal
- suffering Dementia & related mental/cognitive disorders
- in clinical settings/compromised capacity - yng ppl
- non- English speaking.

Work will reach:

- Children's hospital - neurology dept. (partnered by Breathe Arts) 20 YP, & 40 extended family
- Jewish Care home (with Live Music Now) 25 residents & 15 family
- Live Music in Care module development - 6 research artists & 15 practitioners (online event & F2F).

The project will:

- support ppl to create music that meets their own musical identity, offering complete creative agency to individuals with little autonomy
- use improv as a tool to connect play, to storytelling, to creating a character, to using body percussion, to singing etc.
- bring musical activities into a space where children do not have access to live performance & interactive creative processes
- create musical experiences that engage on multiple levels, through use of instruments, sounds & objects that already exist in a hospital space.

The pedagogy research & modular framework will centre:

- participation modalities; use of play & vocalising as a means of personal expression.

The project will:

- address the development of accessible models for creative expression
- redefine care environments & ensure creative engagement opportunities for ppl with real barriers to participation.

Cultural Communities:

How will your project contribute to this outcome?

Up to 1500 characters

The project will:

- work with Jewish Care, accelerating a long-standing relationship (Guillermo delivers wkly sessions as well as a previous 'Dance For Life' project which examined music & movement immersions)
- create a modular framework, supported by a cross sector partnership with Jewish Care, hospitals, Live Music Now & Breathe Arts that reframes the therapeutic environment as a space for creative engagement in order to better understand the needs of those in the health & care systems & offer responsive cultural experiences, centering improv as a tool for engagement & creative skill development - inc. wider GLO/GSO documentation.
- develop evaluatory systems that capture the impact on cross sector outputs & outcomes, e.g. at the Evelina Children's hospital, delivery KPI's gauged against environmental adaptations will be measured against EDI metrics to determine a module that can be adapted by music practitioners in myriad care settings.

It:

- offers new research into how creative interventions can promote wellbeing published via final Live Music Now - Live music in Care modular approach
- broadens the scope for musical/vocal/movement practitioners to work in cross sector environments, engaging national Breathe Arts Health research framework; their existing programme at Guy's and St. Thomas enables this pilot programme at the Evelina Children's Hospital
- collabs with existing cultural orgs to improve their GLO outputs in new environments.

A Creative and Cultural Country:

How will your project contribute to this outcome?

Up to 1500 characters

Led by Guillermo, it's supported by Jaka Skapin, Kate Smith & Sylvia Schmidt (Argentinian, Slovenian, Germanic heritage) members of the core Anthropos ensemble.

Founded on the idea of combining international folkloric pedagogies in vocal work; integrating ancient modalities with modern therapeutic practice to create an integrated voice, movement & improvisation practice. Developing a framework for new to the modality practitioners it will:

- improve the visibility of the benefits of vocal improv
- sustain the careers of 5 mid career artists
- involve 6 research group members - community musicians, receiving training, shadowing opps & collaborative delivery sessions
- engage & develop the repertoire of 15 other vocal/music practitioners in the research phase
- create a co-designed pedagogical publication
- share work in a digital event designed to capture the findings, disseminate research nationally & encourage others to interact with the practice.

The project taps into global musical narratives, from genres to rhythm; creating universal tools that engage everyone in the room at different levels, whilst platforming the musical identities of the practitioners, & centering the UK in innovative, collaborative & international cultural activities.

Its cross cultural ethos empowers musicians to break the neo-colonised cycle of formal training as a barrier to becoming a music leader.

You need to complete the section on Inclusivity and Relevance.

You can answer any of the other questions in this section to help you develop your own approach to adopting the Investment Principles. If you do answer any of the other questions we'll take that information into consideration when we make a decision on your application

When we look at your answers to the questions in this section, where relevant, we will think about:

- If the Investment Principles you have responded to are relevant to the scale of your project, and what you want it to achieve
- If you have used the Investment Principles to give an in-depth picture of your project
- If the target audiences for the activity are clearly identified
- If you have thought about how your project could help you to make a contribution to the Creative Case for Diversity

- the quality of the experience for the people taking part in the project
- if the activity increases opportunities for people who don't currently get involved in the creativity and culture or are involved a little in creative and cultural activity
- if the activity increases opportunities for people already taking part in creative and cultural activity
- if plans to market the activity to audiences are well-defined, and are likely to achieve your aims
- if there is no immediate opportunity to involve people (for example, research and development), whether there is potential for the public to get involved in the future; and
- If you are you taking steps to improve the environmental responsibility of your project

All applicants need to complete the section on Inclusivity and Relevance.

Inclusivity and Relevance

This Investment Principle is about England's diversity being fully reflected in the organisations and individuals we support and the culture they produce through:

Communities

- Tell us who you want to reach with this project, how you have identified them, and how they have been involved in the planning and/or creative process
- Tell us about the steps will you take to make sure your project is open and accessible to people within the communities you plan to work with

Up to 1500 characters

The project targets:

- CYP in health care settings
- older people with dementia
- music practitioners working in health care settings
- cultural orgs working in the social prescription & inter sector ecology.

The project has immediate & confirmed interaction with the cohorts of interest via existing relationships with Jewish Care, Live Music Now & Breathe Arts. The core team have already delivered test sessions, & Guillermo has a long standing relationship with staff & residents & has organised informal interviews during the testing phase to examine the effects of the work, how it is perceived & what kind of activities they would like more of. During delivery, a research group of diverse community musicians will ensure the modular pedagogy is tested & co-designed by those who will use it. 50% are in place & the rest triaged through Live Music Now. Potential training / online sharing event for the vocal improvisation module for Live Music Now will reach a large national pool of musicians through Art Jobs, Arts Admin, Breathe Arts & Live Music Now direct mail outs.

Participants' responses to taster sessions at Jewish Care inc:

- They brought texture, colour, movement & music, which we don't have so much of now
- This is amazing
- Too much, too much beauty!

Each taster session was preceded & followed by a check in with the care home, hospital & partner staff to develop information about the participants & their needs.

Workforce

- If you're engaging a team of people to work on your project, or are working in partnership with other individuals or organisations, tell us:
- How you will ensure they reflect the communities you wish to reach
- How you will ensure access to opportunities are open and accessible
- If you're not working with anyone else on your project you should explain why and consider how working with others would help you to reflect the communities you wish to reach.

Up to 1500 characters

In the hospital setting, the work is reaching extremely diverse communities, so the artists research group curates different cultural perspectives to add to the existing members of the ensemble. The onboarded members are well known musicians, who focus their work around community & connecting deeply to their cultural background. The 3 new members will come via an open call, in collaboration with Live Music Now, which has a national roster of diverse community artists.

Working with Jewish Care, with an older, Jewish demographic, ensures staff understand Jewish culture & is enriched by Caribbean, Asian, African, South American staff. In the Evelina hospital, in central London wards, the patients, staff & families are from diverse backgrounds, so the ensemble & research group is devised to match that. The project will:

- visible representation
- encourage sightlines for emerging creative (esp YP in hospital)
- create safe connected spaces with relatable cultural experiences that protect against othering, micro aggression & elitist tropes of top down delivery.

Live Music Now & Breathe Arts connect the project, & vocal improv approaches to national conversations around culture & creativity in social prescription / healthcare settings & ensure the pedagogy is disseminated across apposite networks for maximum impact & usability.

Creative Case

- Tell us how your project addresses the Creative Case for Diversity

Read about the Creative Case for Diversity here

- All work is free to access
- The pedagogy is informed by global folkloric traditions
- The process centres vocal work, movement & musical activity that requires no previous skill
- The module for Live Music Now orients around dispelling elitist tropes re musical training in order to lead music work in the community whilst centering excellence
- Access support is provided for any live events, & large print versions of the impact reports
- The participation model requires no skill set or previous experience
- Digital event to share pedagogy will include captioning for the project presentation.

Understanding What Others Think

Up to 1500 characters

The core team have:

- conducted testing sessions with the support of Breathe Arts & Jewish Care - spoken to staff & interviewed test participants after each session.

Taking this baseline data, the team will create an assessment framework to capture:

- Peer(research group artists)
- Partners (Breathe & Live Music Now)
- Participants (children/YP/older health & social care residents)

Working with an evaluator, & in partnership with Live Music Now the team will capture feedback & metrics against KPI indicators to measure quantitative & qualitative responses at the sessions, inc. moments that might be missed as facilitators.

There will be a research group that documents & shares the approach & explores how it applies to each member, given the variable metrics of quality, pedagogy & folkloric inheritance. Musicians will respond to other 'indicators' such as age, health condition, cultural origin etc, & actively scan for & learn to process some elements of the receivers' capacities that might inform the musical content. This information can be obtained directly by asking questions, to the receivers or to staff/ families.

The final module will take this broad approach & condense it in order to deliver engaging sessions based around collaborative vocal improvisation.

Developing Your Work

If this project aims to develop your skills (and those you work with) and contribute to your longer-term ambitions for strengthening the quality of your work, tell us about it here:

X

Up to 1500 characters

The project will:

- develop groups' reflective skills
- publish a peer reviewed & co-devised pedagogy which is widely applicable, clear & accessible
- build the visibility & viability of vocal improv as a tool for cultural / creative engagement in health/social care settings
- improve the understanding & engagement with improv from the music ecology dispelling tropes of it as a trivial/elite modality
- centre anthropos & connected practitioners in order to improve career prospects
- influence the national conversation on social prescription, improving understanding through the publication of a module with an establish cultural partner

It solidifies Guillermo's & the Anthropos collective's ambition to be a holding space between different cultures; de-codifying the process of using collaborative vocal improvisation, music that is co-created spontaneously & in-the-moment, in health & care settings. It builds & tests:

- the wider collective's skills as trainer
- a module; to be delivered under the Live Music in Care programme within the existing Live Music Now approach
- an online sharing event
- first ever commissioned impact report of the deliverables
- project management skills working with multiple national organisations.

Measuring Your Progress

If you are setting out what good looks like for your project and know how you'll track how well you're doing and how well it's been received, tell us about it here:

X

Up to 1500 characters

Good in terms of the delivery will be reflected in the measurement of:

- numbers of engagement
- participants responses (through joining in, attentive listening, other changes in behaviour)
- verbal answers to questions
- participation in conversation.
- amount of time someone's attention is held for
- how residents join in musically, utilise movement, possibly stand, & begin a musical section.
- the feedback afterwards from them, their visitors & staff.

Documented through video & photos at iterative visits, & supported by the evaluator, who will shadow delivery; the ensemble will collect quotes & employ an autoethnographic process for gathering experiences & learning.

For the research group & pedagogy, 'good' means:

- confidence demonstrated in the artists collective to improvise & work collaboratively
- understanding cues from everyone in the space & ability to adapt
- building a toolkit that engages on multiple levels.

Every visit to the hospital will see collaborations with different members of staff, patients & visitors; inherently testing how flexible the approach is, & how improvisation allows adaptation to better engage. Guillermo & Jaka have previously delivered duo work, working in a trio & a quartet enables a vision of what success looks like when the number of performers changes to inform new models of participation (included in the attachment).

Dynamism

This Investment Principle is about being dynamic and able to respond to the challenges of the next decade.

Anthropos video delivery example from a past project at Jewish Care: <https://youtu.be/a0RkeoMLQg0>

A list of direct quotes from the participants captured during and after a Jewish Care taster session.

“This is amazing.”

“Too much, too much beauty!”

“The best day of my life.”

“We had no idea what to expect”

“They brought texture, colour, movement and music, which we don’t have so much of now.”

“We couldn’t have planned it.”

A quote from Sarah Lennard, who attended previous sessions at Jewish Care as a family member of a resident.

“It was such an unexpected pleasure and privilege to meet you and your fellow performers last week, I was totally blown away by what I witnessed and experienced.

You and your troupe delivered an original and truly magical experience, you transported the residents to another place and I felt like I was watching a beautiful dream or memory.

The music made both with the instruments and voices conjured up a primal energy that we are all connected to and it was refreshing to see the residents being exposed to something new and innovative. it was pleasurable to see the residents reacting in different ways to the flow of the session.

Work permitting, I hope to catch the next session, I would be very happy to encourage the residents to interact more and help those that want to get up and move around the space

Keep doing what you do, it's amazing!”

A quote from Jojo Dando, a Centre & Outreach Coordinator at Jewish Care, collected after a taster session.

“Your approach to music by engaging and connecting with people really shows. Members who would normally stay quiet, sang along with you. Some who normally doze off, laughed with you. And pretty much the entire room participated in some way whether by singing along, moving their bodies (whether they stayed seated or standing up) and engaged in conversation with you. What I noticed the most is how the members felt in control and almost helped lead the session thanks to the interaction you provided with them.”

A quote from Becky Harrison, a Breathe Arts Engagement and Support Officer, collected after a taster session.

The improvisation style of music worked perfectly as a form of musical play in Evelina Children's Hospital. Anthropos visited individual or groups of beds and were able to adjust their practise to exactly what the children needed, whether that be singing the child's name, inviting the children to play the instruments or devising a musical story with a child. One non-verbal child had a profound physical reaction to the music. A Play Specialist at Evelina children's hospital commented "I think the music is really beneficial, especially for non-verbal patients as it provides a strong sensory experience."

A note from Guillermo:

I have been working with Jewish Care and Breathe Arts for more than a decade as a 'participative performer' (singer guitarist) and after the DYCP I began offering vocal improvisation projects to them. The reason JC employed me in the first place was that they wanted from me an intervention 'more person-centred and less patronising' than most entertainers' performances, and 'with a therapeutic outlook, but more dynamic, engaging and fun than the music therapy sessions'.

I feel that I've developed these competences as much as I could as a performer, but gliding from conventional songs as a solo performer into vocal improvisation with collaborators has made all the difference. The creation in-the-moment and collaboratively, in response to what's happening, the constant adapting to the tastes and identities of participants and staff, the use of sound and invented language as the musical material as opposed to well-known songs have really deepened these aspects of participation and engagement. More than ever, I feel that we are 'singing with' rather than 'singing for'.

Until now, I have expected that the organisations that I worked for would orchestrate the evaluation processes, as I believed it would be helpful for them. But now I realise the importance of generating our own evaluation, for the purpose of developing our pedagogy, and then be able to share these approaches and tools with other artists in the Music in Health fields, and encourage them to use more vocal improvisation in their practice. Also, to pave the way for these organisations to begin thinking of vocal improvisation projects more seriously. And most importantly, to establish new collaborations with other Music in Health stakeholders and practitioners.

Guillermo's history with Live Music Now

I came across LMN and their work back in 2002 when I was living in Sheffield. Met Sarah Derbyshire who was then the national director of LMN and the regional director of Yorkshire Arts (who I was delivering workshops for) I requested to join the scheme as a resident musician in order to work in prisons, SEN schools, Care settings, etc, and at the time the scheme was only open for young, outstanding classical musicians- I went on to become one of the first migrant artists and 'World Music' performers to join the scheme, and that led to them changing their policy (I was already 32) and offering many opportunities to outstanding artists from all backgrounds and ages. I was part of the scheme for 5 years and then went on to become a mentor for artists entering the scheme and delivered some other trainings. I still keep in touch with them and occasionally they involve me in their new projects. they are interested in my expertise and practice in vocal improvisation and collaborative improvisation tools, and their potential for music in care settings interventions.

Guillermo's history with Breathe Arts Health Research (BAHR)

I began work for BAHR through Live Music Now, when it was still a branch of Guys and St Thomas' charity performing arts programme. Firstly I met their General Director, Yvonne Farquharson, as a regular performer for their hospital lunchtime concert series. then I found out about the resident musicians' programme and requested to take part. Again, at the time most of the resident artists were classical guitarists or harpists, from folk, latin or classical backgrounds. I entered the scheme as a singer- guitarist back in 2012 and keep regularly collaborating with them. Recently i have requested to have an opportunity to trial fully improvised a cappella vocal music in the hospital settings, and so far it has been a success.

Guillermo's history with Jewish Care

In 2016 was contacted by Caroline De Souza, then the person in charge of the Artists' programme in all the JC care homes in London. I came recommended by BAHHR as someone who straddled the performing and the therapeutic. They were looking for someone to deliver music interventions for elderly with moderate to severe dementia and Alzheimers, with a different approach, neither a conventional entertainer nor a music therapist. They let me experiment and develop my immersive music sessions and I m still working for the organisation. Gradually I introduced them to my work as a vocal improviser and have been finding spaces to utilise that part of my artistry in the deliveries for their care homes. In the last two years, they utilised fully improvised music for their Dance For Life residencies, where fellow vocal improvisers (myself and Jaka Skapin) worked alongside three dance movement therapists and delivered regular fully improvised immersive performances.

Anthropos: Songs of Humanity

Case Study: A collaborative vocal improvisation quartet intervention at the Evelina Children's Hospital, by Kate Smith, Sylvia Schmidt, Jaka Skapin and Guillermo Rozenhuler

Through BAHR (Breathe Arts Health Research) we were invited as a vocal trio to deliver two one-hour sessions of fully improvised music to patients of the Ocean and Beach wards at the ECH. This involved a series of short bed-side interactions with young patients from - month old to 14-years old (affected by different conditions, mostly neurological and haematological) in the ward setting. We visited 6 common rooms, focusing on one child at a time, but our interventions reached the whole space of each room, including staff and occasionally other patients and families.

Each child seemed very isolated from each other and the environment was friendly but highly medicalised, with occasional noises from hospital monitors and other machinery. This is a brief account of some of those interactions, to help describe the different ways that we utilise improvised music and how we endeavour to adapt to each person's circumstance. A nurse accompanied us and guided us to each patient.

Child 1 : A non- verbal two-year old, sitting in his father's arms. We started by offering some up tempo rhythmic pieces with simple vocal syllables and accompanied by a hand drum. It took a while for the father to understand that we were not in a performance setting and therefore expecting a response- clapping etc but simply interacting and offering sound and accompaniment to the infant. He was attentive and very still, and the father also became quieter and receptive . We then improvised a song utilising the boy's first name.

Child 2 : A 14-year old boy with severe neurological symptoms such as involuntary spasms, non-verbal and laying horizontal with his head turned to one side. We positioned ourselves in order to see and reach his face, we began singing long sustained tones and layering different harmonic textures and moving around his bed, his response was calming down the spasms, then in a couple of more rhythmic pieces he smiled and joined us with sounds which was very moving. His excitement built and then, following the music, he calmed down and became very settled.

Child 3 : A five- year old boy, non-verbal but very active physically, alongside his mum and a nurse.

We improvised two or three short polyphonic pieces with different characters, accompanied by a shaker. The child responded with movement and seemed interested and engaged. Then he laid on the floor and made physical and eye contact with us as we were singing- we followed through and sat on the floor for this interaction. He also played with the shaker and was very present during the interaction.

Child 4 : A 12-year old girl, verbal and cognitively alert. She was drawing by numbers. We began with a short conversation and then made up our first piece with the theme of numbers and counting stars. She responded very well to it, and we had some more conversation , asking about her favourite animals. We moved into a song - style piece following a narrative and occasionally introducing new characters and humour. She looked engaged and cheery and thanked us afterwards.

Child 5 : A 6 -year old child sitting at his bed alongside his dad. The father shared that he was a professional musician. The kid was clearly very musical and interested in sounds and harmonies. We sang a couple more complex pieces with interlocking rhythms and changing harmonies and he looked content and transfixed by the sounds. We sang for some minutes without interruption, moving from one improvised piece to another. They thanked us at the end.

Child 6 : A 10- year old girl who was sitting alone in bed and inward- looking. We approached her and asked if she would like some music. She agreed and Kate improvised a song with words that we supported, speaking about nature elements and change. The girl transformed and engaged more and more as we were singing and looked joyful at the end, when she thanked us.

Child 7 : A six-month old baby accompanied by his father. We asked the dad for permission, then improvised a lullaby song with invented language and afterwards a more rhythmic piece. The father had a very positive response to the sound of our singing voices, becoming calm and soft, and this in turn seemed to affect the infant, who looked content and engaged with eye contact.

Delivering improvised musical interventions in health settings: starting points, approaches and strategies

Improvisational musical interventions in health settings are ideally:

Immersive

There's no separation between musicians and receivers, everyone is invited to participate and the space is not used in conventional performative ways, but more as a zone to invite exchange, dynamic interactions, play and transformation. As sound is inherently immersive, even the people who are present in the common space and not directly engaged are affected by it.

Spontaneous

All the musical content is made in the moment, and essentially in response to the relationship that emerges between artists and the person or people receiving the music. The connection between the musicians and their individual and collective intuitions also play an important role. So before the improvised music comes the deep listening, tuning in, expanding one's sensitivities and entering a heightened awareness - feeling shared space. This skill can be cultivated and practiced.

Relational and in-response to

The music is co-created in the moment by the musicians, and the receivers also play a part, informing the musicians with their faces, bodies and sometimes with language; joining the music, either in more obvious active ways, singing or with other vocal sounds, with any form of movement or rhythm. But also with their facial expressions or movements, however minute these might be. The success of the intervention is always based on this responsiveness.

Musicians also relate and respond to other 'indicators' such as age, health condition, cultural origin revealed by the name, etc, and can actively scan for and learn to sense and process some elements of the receivers' capacities and hypothetical background that might inform the musical content. This information can be obtained directly by asking questions, to the receivers or to staff- families who might know, or intuited by the musicians.

One can argue that this is delicate territory, as the musicians' perceptions/assumptions might be biased (e.g. someone offering a rap-style piece to a young black person, who might prefer other styles of music). But that's part of the nature of the improvised interactions, and musicians can cultivate the ability to adapt and enquire more directly if they find out their perception was misguided. There's always a huge amount of risk-taking. What matters is the intent to connect and meet the person wherever they are.

Flexible and person-centred

Flexibility and adaptability are a must-have. These can manifest in the artists' capacity to decide together when to end, or how to change course without interrupting the flow, or to interrupt if appropriate, or how long an interaction with a patient lasts. Or whether to use or not use language, touch, movement, eye contact. Decisions about tempo, mood, key, vocal quality, dynamics etc. are taken consensually in the flow of the moment, sometimes led by the intuition of one of the artists but this role of leading the collective responsivity is itself fluid and changeable. The point of this flexibility is to endeavour to notice respond as best as possible to the condition of the people receiving, as it's very rare that one can ask directly to a received 'what do you need now?' so this is bridged as best as possible by an attitude of inner stillness, openness, curiosity and inquisitiveness on behalf of the artists. And also by their ability to change gradually or radically at any point, in response to signs or sometimes to direct requests or responses from the people receiving the music.

Multilayered

Probably more than with any other style of music-making, there are many simultaneous levels of awareness at play at any moment in time. To list some of these levels: the musicians' ever- shifting individual and collective musical choices, their internal somatic awareness, the awareness of the space around them, the collective 'body' of the ensemble in sound and motion (the experiencing of the mutual connection between the artists). The individual and collective intuiting and reading of the receivers and of the shared space, and how they might transform and respond - positively or negatively- to the music. The musicians' need to become skilled at fluid responses - and sometimes musical solutions- to unexpected or permanent challenges - e.g. a sudden or persistent machine noise in the hospital environment.

Some principles that support the beginning of the interaction:

1-Someone has to start! The other musicians might join immediately, either one by one or all at the same time. Or sometimes choose to leave this person alone for a while, to explore and lay a 'landscape' that they feel able to enrich, or accompany. Sometimes with complex and dense ideas, sometimes with a simple supporting part.

2-Repetition and variation: these need to be constantly assessed by everyone performing and in- the moment- choices are made on behalf of how each person senses the motion of the piece: 'what does the music want?'

3-Begin with simplicity, or with a strongly delineated idea. Sometimes offering a very simple starting place can give everyone time to find their way to respond and the 'core' of the song can emerge gradually and co-creatively from this starting place defined by its ambiguity: it can go to many places. Another option is for someone to start with a strong, instantly 'formed' phrase or solo that will have melodic, harmonic and rhythmic cues for others to join and accompany. The skill to respond to these ideas grows with practice.

Some musical starting places for collaborative improvisation:

0-Atmospheric sound: begin with breathing sounds, or random 'ambient' sounds and let form and shape emerge from this starting place.

1-rhythm: can be tapped, clapped, sung or played by a musical instrument. Someone begins with a pulse or pattern and a piece evolves in response to this initial prompt.

2- a pitch. Someone offers a pitched sound- usually a long sustained tone, and the piece evolves from this note- it can be reinforced by unison, or harmonised, or complemented by rhythm, or it can become the drone-like foundation for someone's melody.

3- a pattern made with invented language. A syllable or a group of 2 or more syllables will give a strong character to the beginning of a piece, inviting other polyphonic parts that utilise the same syllabic material, or perhaps an accompaniment or long notes or rhythm . It can be sung or spoken. Sometimes a pattern will be repeated (looped) and become the foundation for other melodic developments.

4- a concrete verbal cue- someone's name, or a word, or a 'theme' that becomes a prompt can also be a starting place .

5- a musical phrase that can be repeated and joined by others and become an spontaneous chant. These stem from patterns that are extended and organised as instant composition, a skill that can be practiced and developed.

6- a solo, where one person follows their impulse and musical imagination, ideally leaving space for others to join, and also being clear with the choices of melodic and rhythmic content to invite collaboration.
