

Introduction

National Lottery Project Grants

We will ask you questions about different parts of your activity:

- Some basic details about your project – when it's happening, what it's called
- What you want to do, why, and what you want it to achieve
- Who your project will engage, and how they'll engage with it
- How you will manage the project
- The budget for the project

We will use the information you give us in this application to decide whether we will offer you a grant.

The first few screens are autofilled with information you have already provided in your applicant profile. If you need to make any amendments, go back to the 'Applicants' section and edit your applicant profile.

Throughout Grantium, any questions marked with an asterisk (*) must be answered otherwise you won't be able to submit your form.

All our text boxes have a character limit. Please stick to this character limit as any additional text won't be saved.

Responding to Project Grants Priorities

Your project is responding to the following priority:

Selected priority: - Not applying against any Time Limited Priority -

Essential information

In this section we'll ask you some basic details about you and your project.

What do we mean by 'project'?

- A series of activities or a piece of work.
- A project has a start and an end date
- A project has a set of measurable aims that you'd like to achieve in that time.

Amount requested

Tell us the total amount you are applying to us for, including any personal access costs* (£): £29,133

How much of this request is for your / your collaborators' personal access costs?* (£): £0

*If you, or the people you are working with, are:

- deaf or disabled,
- neurodivergent,
- experience learning difficulties,
- have a mental health or
- long term health condition,

there may be extra costs relating to your access needs. These could be to help you deliver the project, or for the online management of your grant.

Some examples are a BSL interpreter, a notetaker or specialist tutor for admin support, counselling costs during your project.

Do you, or does your organisation object to receiving National Lottery funding for religious reasons? No

Fair pay

Arts Council England is committed to ensuring proper and fair payment to artists and those who work in the creative industries. Please read the Fair pay section of our How to apply guidance for more information.

Have you used a recognised industry standard to work out how to pay artists and professionals involved in your project (including you)? Yes - If so, which one?

Please explain in more detail.

Up to 600 characters

This project acknowledges minimum living wage standards across its fee structure. Freelance arts professionals & practitioners' costs are calculated in line with industry standards.

If there are other people included in the delivery of my project, as workers or volunteers, I am aware of my responsibilities:

Feasibility and risk

This section helps us to understand how you will successfully deliver your project.

We need to know your plans for managing the project, what your budget is and how you will respond to any risks or challenges.

You don't need to have managed a project before, but you need to be able to demonstrate that you have given consideration to how you will manage the project, the budget, and any risks/challenges, and that you or your project partners have the skills to ensure it is delivered successfully.

When we look at your answers to the questions in this section we will think about:

- whether the budget is appropriate for the scale and type of activity?
- how appropriate are the areas of income and spending?
- whether all items in the budget are relevant and reasonable [are fees or wages appropriate to the context? Have quotes for assets/equipment been appropriately researched for any purchases?]
- whether the activity is attracting income from other sources; - is any other income confirmed? If not, are your potential income sources realistic?
- if appropriate financial controls are in place - Do you or the people you're working with have the necessary skills to manage the budget?
- if the activity is realistic and well-planned, and if you have demonstrated that you or the people you are working with are able to deliver the project

Project timeline

Project dates

Tell us the start and end dates for your project.

Please allow enough time to plan your project and for us to process your application, as well as enough time for us to make a payment before your start date if your project is successful. See our How to apply guidance for more details.

The dates you give here should be the dates for the full project you're asking us to fund.

We need eight weeks to process applications for £30,000 and under.

Project start date: 09/01/2023

Project end date: 21/09/2023

Please use the tool below to list the main stages and tasks of the project from the start date onwards, and to show who will lead on each element of the project. Please add each project stage in order. You must enter at least one stage.

To create the table, click the 'Add new item' icon on the left of the screen to add a project stage. To add more than one stage, use the 'Save and Add another' button.

The table at the bottom of the page will populate with the information you enter about the stages of your project.

Budget - Income

Income table

Please complete the income table below with all your cash income, as well as any support in kind you will receive. (By support in kind we mean goods or services that you would otherwise have to pay for, but are being provided for free.)

Remember:

- Your budget must balance. This means your total income needs to be the same amount as your total expenditure.
- Only include income that relates specifically to this project.
- Do not include personal access costs in the income table. These are automatically included in the total amount you are requesting from us.
- For any earned income you should include how these amounts have been calculated in the description field, for example:

Ticket sales (7 dates @ 60% of 100 capacity x £8 ticket price) £3,360

To add an income line

To add each income line, click the 'Add new item' icon on the left of the screen. To add more than one line of expenditure, use the 'Save and Add another' button.

Budget - Expenditure

Expenditure table

Please complete the expenditure table below with all your cash expenditure.

Remember:

- Your budget must balance. This means your total expenditure needs to be the same amount as your total income.
- Only include expenditure that will be spent between the start and end date of your project.
- The table already includes any Support in kind you added on the Income screen so you do not need to add this.
- Breakdown your expenditure so we can understand your costs, for example: Artist fee (2 x Creative specialists @ £150 per day for 10 days = £3,000)

Name: Latin American Women's Rights Service (LAWRS)

Main contact (if organisation): Dolores Modern

Email address: dolores@lawrs.org.uk

Role in project: Outreach & participant triage partner: LAWRS is a human rights, feminist organisation run by & for Latin American migrant women living in the UK. The organisation supports 5,000 women per annum; those who are exposed to violations of their fundamental human rights - women & girls facing violence, exploitation in low-paid sectors, trafficking, or those enduring severe poverty & deprivation. They will partner with MinA for the IS project, providing outreach into the Brazilian women's cleaning community, triaging & supporting those women to participate in the project, liaising throughout with MinA to ensure subsistence & transportation payments are met & offering ongoing support after the project ends. LAWRS & MinA have previously partnered to deliver a projects in 2021 & 2022 entitled - 'We still fight in the dark' & 'Body, colours and songs'. This is a tried & tested partnership with a model that includes individual case working /counselling for participants to develop referral pathways & signpost mechanisms to engage women in activities, ensuring their safety while with MinA. LAWRS's 'Violence Against Women & Girls' (VAWG) team manager will observe workshops & rehearsals to ensure the safety of all the women cleaners involved. Women referred by LAWRS go through a pre-selective process where professionals discuss if they are out of crisis, ready to socialise &/or be exposed. LAWRS will also offer discounted space in which to hold the drama based-focus groups.

Role in project: Mentoring, safeguarding, PR, development &
Up to 2000 characters strategy: People's Palace Project (PPP) is an arts research centre; a subsidiary of Queen Mary University, London. It brings together artists, activists, academics & audiences to challenge social injustice through the power of the arts. The organisation works in the UK & Brazil with a remit that includes collaborating with marginalised communities & investigating the power of creativity in order to effect (as far as possible) societal change. With a growing global network of partners, PPP advocates for equality, climate justice & better health through the arts. In 2019, MinA became a PPP associate. For Invisible People, PPP will mentor Carolina Cal, MinA's artistic director, as she applies the Verbatim Formula & also provide artistic guidance & safeguarding compliance throughout the whole project. In addition, PPP will conduct regular admin & finance meetings, discuss updates & running costs against cash flow & support the evolution of MinA into a CIC. Thus, ensuring both the project's legacy & the development of MinA as a company beyond the end of the project. PPP will also provide PR for Invisible People across its networks; share project updates & events on their social media as well as archive the project on their online portfolio.

Risks and challenges

What are the main risks and challenges to your project meeting its aims?
What will you do to manage these risks?

Up to 1500 characters

Attracting & retaining participants

Carolina co-founded MinA in 2018 to combat - through art & advocacy - the violence & exploitation faced by Brazilian migrant women workers in the UK. To date, MinA has worked with 200+ women & delivered 3 high profile projects with direct impact on participant outcomes. To ensure access & retention on the IP programme MinA has:

- Partnered with high profile orgs/charities & academic institutions working directly with target groups
- Curated a suite of outreach, advocacy & PR partners
- Budgeted for travel/subsistence to ensure money is no obstacle to participation
- Created opportunities /pipelines for further CPD for previous participants who in turn advocate in target communities & manifest the programme's potential.

Safeguarding & flexibility needed for women to participate

Carolina's academic partners' research has highlighted the gender-based violence Brazilian women endure. IP will work as a safe space for participants to build a sense of community through arts practice. Also, since most are employed in the gig economy, flexibility is key. To these ends, Carolina has also secured:

- Professional safeguarding & retention individual
- Flexible venue /rehearsal options @ Brazilian Embassy, LAWRS, Queen Mary University & KCL – to ensure women's attendance.

Delivering the Outcomes

Your Project and the Outcomes

Our strategy sets out three outcomes; Creative People, Cultural Communities and A Creative and Cultural Country. We do not expect every project to address all three outcomes, but we do want projects to align to at least one and to set out in detail how particular components are being addressed.

You can read about our three outcomes here: <https://www.artscouncil.org.uk/outcomes-0>

When we look at your answers to the questions in this section, where relevant we will think about:

- How your project is supporting people at all stages of their lives to design, develop and increase their participation in high quality creative activities
- If your project focuses on children and young people:
 - If your project reaches families from a wide range of backgrounds
 - If you are widening and improving opportunities for children and young people to take part in creative activities outside schools
 - if your project is supporting children and young people to develop their creative skills and potential
- If you are working with communities to better understand and respond to their needs and interests, resulting in increased cultural engagement and the wide range of social benefits it brings
- If your project is exploring new types of creative practice, new forms of cultural content and new ways of reaching new and existing audiences and participants
- If you are collaborating with other cultural organisations and/or with the commercial creative industries and/or with further and higher education that focuses on innovation, research and development and training, especially in relation to the use of new technologies
- If your project is strengthening the international connections of cultural organisations and creative and cultural practitioners, including co-production and touring
- If your project is bringing world-class culture to audiences in England
- If your project helps to ensure people have opportunities to sustain their careers and fulfil their potential in the creative industries, especially those who are currently under-represented
- If your project is connecting people and places, nationally and internationally

How will your project contribute to the delivery of at least one of our Outcomes, including which, if any, of the Outcome components?

A Creative and Cultural Country: England's cultural sector is innovative, collaborative and international, Cultural Communities: Villages, towns and cities thrive through a collaborative approach to culture, Creative People: Everyone can develop and express creativity throughout their life

Please click the 'Save' button below after you have answered the question.

Creative people:How will your project contribute to this outcome?

Up to 1500 characters

IP works with communities to better understand & respond to their needs/ interests by:

- Using new, creative Verbatim Formula to facilitate "Invisible People" to express their experience in their own words
- Tell/perform these stories to their peers & employers & open a dialogue leading to change.

Brazilian cleaning women in London are often hired by companies that never see them or know they exist & certainly know nothing of the indignities/abuses they face! Thus, through a structured devising method & expert facilitation, IP will inspire & support Brazilian women cleaners to:

- Explore stories via innovative techniques that "hear" & acknowledge lived experience
- Record the stories & use them to co-devise a theatre piece
- Use body & movement coaching (with dance & props) to create rhythmic scenarios where objects (mops, buckets, hoovers etc) come to life in revolutionary ways
- Perform the resultant piece to peers & families - but more importantly to their employers in a high-profile London venue.

Additionally, MinA's model involves CPD for previous participants & thus IP supports:

- 8 wk playwriting course for Simone Souza to develop the script for Invisible People
- Community Organiser training for Simone Amorim (MinA's community adviser since participating)
- Media & social media training for Karina Sgarbi.

Two further participant/volunteers will work with partner, Gandaia to learn aspects of costume-making & creative techniques with recycled materials.

Cultural Communities:How will your project contribute to this outcome?

Up to 1500 characters

Brazilians are only recognised as an ethnic minority in 4 London boroughs. This limits access to services & leaves the community vulnerable to exploitation. MinA tirelessly shines a light on this issue & seeks to widen community arts access by offering Brazilian women:

- Access to expert arts facilitation through weekly focus groups with dedicated safeguarding
- Body movement & music training @ flexible times/venues
- Access to costume design & recycled making techniques
- Platform for developing artistic voices, recording stories & learning aspects of studio practice
- Opportunity to co-devise a theatre piece with professional theatre maker
- Showcasing the resultant work at a high-profile London venue (BAC).

Target audience for the Premiere includes Brazilian UK diaspora & also the people who employ them. IP will engage these via:

- Outreach partners embedded in vulnerable Latin American communities
- Policy & research organisations who work with vulnerable groups & employers (inc. Brazilian embassy)
- Targeted online campaign to engage all LA demographics.

IP seeks to support & sustain the creative lives & abilities of the diaspora by:

- Offering a creative pipeline or "Social Prescription" if you will, for vulnerable Brazilian communities to develop arts practice
- Creative, digital & arts management courses for previous participants to enhance lifelong practice & employability.

A Creative and Cultural Country:

How will your project contribute to this outcome?

Up to 1500 characters

MinA is collaborating with a wide-ranging suite of world-class partners to ensure deliverable outcomes. These include higher education establishments (King's College & Queen Mary's) which focus on academic research into vulnerable LA communities & which deliver high-profile, international projects that aim to effect social change.

MinA's work with People's Palace Projects, in particular, has already produced research data that could change Brazilian women's lives (see attachment). This has resulted in the development of the Verbatim Formula & Toolkit - being further trialled in this project. PPP will also provide key safeguarding support which will have longitudinal reach far beyond project end - especially via Violence Against Women & Girls (VAWG) which is acting with LAWRS to deliver on this project. PPP is also committed to archiving the project in the interest of future reference & research.

IP also involves collaborations with policy & advocacy organisations, most notably FLEX; committed to the rights of vulnerable workers & those working to combat labour exploitation.

Cultural organisation, Gandaia will be delivering wkshps but is also a key partner which will serve to strengthen MinA's international connections as it works between UK & Brazil - recycling carnival costumes & equipment.

The Investment Principles

Your Project and the Investment Principles

The Investment Principles are an important part of our strategy and we encourage you to use them to strengthen the planning and delivery of your project.

Our Investment Principles are:

- Ambition and Quality
- Dynamism
- Environmental Responsibility
- Inclusivity and Relevance

You can read about our Investment Principles here

In this section you can use the Investment Principles to build up a more in-depth picture of your project, which in turn will give us a stronger understanding of your intentions and plans, and how your project will contribute to delivering our Strategy.

- applications for £100,000 and under

You need to complete the section on Inclusivity and Relevance.

You can answer any of the other questions in this section to help you develop your own approach to adopting the Investment Principles. If you do answer any of the other questions we'll take that information into consideration when we make a decision on your application

When we look at your answers to the questions in this section, where relevant, we will think about:

- If the Investment Principles you have responded to are relevant to the scale of your project, and what you want it to achieve
- If you have used the Investment Principles to give an in-depth picture of your project
- If the target audiences for the activity are clearly identified
- If you have thought about how your project could help you to make a contribution to the Creative Case for Diversity
- how the activity might align with our Equality Objectives
- If there is meaningful engagement
- If the project will develop you and your work, or the work/skills of the people/organisations involved
- the quality of the experience for the people taking part in the project
- if the activity increases opportunities for people who don't currently get involved in the creativity and culture or are involved a little in creative and cultural activity
- if the activity increases opportunities for people already taking part in creative and cultural activity
- if plans to market the activity to audiences are well-defined, and are likely to achieve your aims
- if there is no immediate opportunity to involve people (for example, research and development), whether there is potential for the public to get involved in the future; and
- If you are you taking steps to improve the environmental responsibility of your project

All applicants need to complete the section on Inclusivity and Relevance.

Inclusivity and Relevance

This Investment Principle is about England's diversity being fully reflected in the organisations and individuals we support and the culture they produce through:

Communities

- Tell us who you want to reach with this project, how you have identified them, and how they have been involved in the planning and/or creative process
- Tell us about the steps you will take to make sure your project is open and accessible to people within the communities you plan to work with

Up to 1500 characters

Migrants in Action (MinA) is a community theatre programme run by & for Brazilian women in London. MinA's vision is a society free from violence & abuse against women from the Global Majority. The mission is to empower Brazilian women in the diaspora by providing creative & safe spaces for arts learning & collective growth & by bringing their stories to a wider audience.

To this end, IP will reach:

- Brazilian cleaning women living & working in London
- Wider Brazilian diaspora (all genders)
- Company bosses & HR professionals who (wittingly or unwittingly) employ Brazilian cleaners.

To ensure access & engagement of target groups, MinA has curated a suite of key partners expert in & embedded in arts, research, policy-making, organisation & advocacy with regards Brazilian diaspora who also work with communities to devise & deliver arts-based engagement & empowerment programmes.

Key partners (more in partner list) as follows:

- LAWRS (Latin American Women's Rights Service): feminist org run by & for Latin American migrant women in the UK triaging participants & providing project-wide safeguarding/mentoring
- FLEX: research & policy org working towards an end to labour exploitation - advocating & PR to engage employers
- PPP: research centre bringing together artists, activists, academics & audiences to challenge social injustice through the arts & working with MinA on development programmes & delivery of Verbatim Formula.

Workforce

- If you're engaging a team of people to work on your project, or are working in partnership with other individuals or organisations, tell us:

- How you will ensure they reflect the communities you wish to reach
- How you will ensure access to opportunities are open and accessible

- If you're not working with anyone else on your project you should explain why and consider how working with others would help you to reflect the communities you wish to reach.

Up to 1500 characters

IP works tirelessly with target participants/ audiences to understand & meet needs. These are chiefly Brazilian women cleaners but also all Brazilian women & the wider Latin American (LA) diaspora in London.

IP workforce is comprised chiefly of Brazilian women in London as follows:

-Carolina Cal (São Paulo); holds an MA in Applied Theatre from RCSSD where she researched, practiced & developed MinA

-Alba Cabral, wkshp leader; award-winning Brazilian musician & percussionist

-Project manager, Renata Pepl, (Porto Alegre); Senior Research & Project Manager at Queen Mary's on the topics of Gender-Based Violence, Mental Health & Arts

-Simone Amorim, community outreach advisor (Bahia); social worker & founder of 2 Black Brazilian collectives in London fighting against racism & for visibility of the community in the UK

-Beatriz Grasso, content creator (São Paulo); Digital Marketing expert for companies in the UK, US & Brazil.

Thus, IP is entirely representative of the communities the project seeks to reach with all additional collaborators being LA women. Additionally, all IP partners - specifically those conducting outreach/safeguarding – reflect target participants/ audiences in each project strand with Brazilian women making up 90% of the workforce. This is particularly evident through the pipeline "Social Prescription" model as several women involved in IP are previous participants who will manifest future potential through their CPD & paid project involvement.

Creative Case

- Tell us how your project addresses the Creative Case for Diversity

- Building professional networks/ opportunities for Brazilian women in London
- Facilitating collaboration between recognised LA theatre-makers, musicians & body/movement coaches to enhance individual practice
- Creating pathways & opportunities for previous participants to achieve arts management/PR proficiency
- Deepening the understanding of the Verbatim Formula in the wider ecology, particularly with regards Brazilian cleaning women's stories
- Supporting an emerging Brazilian scriptwriter to undertake professional development & enhance artistic excellence
- Encouraging participants to volunteer & learn aspects of costume design & recycling techniques & further expand creative potential
- Offering advice + safeguarding support throughout the project & after project end via key partners embedded in target communities
- Building resilience for MinA to further develop as an organisation, identify funding streams & finesse the Social Prescription model to achieve sustainable, longitudinal outcomes
- Creating digital content to encourage participation & engagement into the future
- Collaborating with high-profile orgs & academic institutions to deliver GLOs across the project & beyond
- Working with LA artists/coaches/partners to ensure colonial aspects of the diaspora experience are represented & understood
- Delivering a high-profile performance in a world class venue to engage employers & deepen/change the understanding of Brazilian migrant women's experiences.

Ambition & Quality

This Investment Principle is about organisations and individuals being ambitious and committed to constantly improving the quality of their work.

You don't have to use this Investment Principle to tell us about your project, but if you think it is relevant to your project you can tick the box(es) below and tell us.

Any information you provide here we will use when making a decision on your application.

Understanding What Others Think

If you are taking steps to understand what people (peers and/or the public) think about your work and how you make it, tell us about it here:

MinA's work is a process of continual research, evaluation & development. Working with KCL & Queen Mary's has meant stringent processes are already in place re: data collection & the Verbatim Formula's methodology. Thus, MinA is invested in understanding how each project performs with regards measurable impact on target community.

IP's quantitative success will be measured as follows:

- Recruitment/engagement/retention of 10 Brazilian women cleaners
- Number of audience members attending Premiere
- Number accessing the live stream
- Number of social media interactions across the project
- Number of docu-short views & dedicated webpage impressions.

In addition, MinA will work with Sasolo to implement multiple feedback scenarios to ascertain qualitative success with regards:

- Creative experiences of participants/artists
- Creative impact re: previous participant development activities
- Experience of live audience
- A focus on employer responses immediately after & 1 month after Premiere
- Carolina's CPD in respect of LAWRS mentorship & Sasolo consultancy
- Overarching experiences of workforce with regards methodology
- Partner satisfaction in re: co-supportive relationships & mutual efficacy.

Feedback scenarios from different user groups will be implemented to include:

- Questionnaires & recorded Zooms
- Recorded interviews with workforce & partners
- Digital review forms accessed via QR code at Premiere exit points & on social media.

Developing Your Work

If this project aims to develop your skills (and those you work with) and contribute to your longer-term ambitions for strengthening the quality of your work, tell us about it here:

MinA makes professional & creative development a priority in each of the projects it undertakes & delivers. For IP's organisational growth, it has secured expert mentorship from PPP; a subsidiary of Queen Mary's, whose director, Alexandra Alvarez, will mentor Carolina as she applies Verbatim methodology & provide ongoing artistic guidance.

Additionally, Alexandra will:

- Consult with Carolina & Taline Schubach (safeguarding specialist), to further develop organisational expertise & ensure robust compliance is in place
- Conduct regular admin & finance meetings & develop MinA's project management practice
- Support the overarching evolution of MinA into a CIC.

MinA is also committed to workforce CPD with particular emphasis on the pipeline to success / "Social Prescription" model of participant - leading to paid intern - leading to paid professional. To this end IP will pay for courses & provide travel/subsistence for 3 of MinA's past participants to develop their:

- Arts management practice (+ offer freelance employment)
- Scriptwriting expertise (+ offer first professional artist fee)
- Social media management acumen (+ offer a paid PR role in the project).

Improving outcomes for participants is central to MinA's model. In turn those participants become pivotal to effective outreach. Working with Gandaia, the target user group will develop as follows:

- Learn body movement & theatre techniques
- Learn aspects of "green" costume making.

Measuring Your Progress

If you are setting out what good looks like for your project and know how you'll track how well you're doing and how well it's been received, tell us about it here:

Dynamism

This Investment Principle is about being dynamic and able to respond to the challenges of the next decade.

You don't have to use this Investment Principle to tell us about your project, but if you think it is relevant to your project you can tick the box(es) below and tell us.

Any information you provide here we will use when making a decision on your application.

The way you work

If you are testing your organisation's model or your individual practice to ensure you can account for change, or adjust when things do not go as planned, tell us about it here:

X

Up to 1500 characters

Via PPP & Sasolo, MinA will identify key performance indicators (KPIs) which will inform a theory of change (TOC) document to be presented at the final evaluation with a view to responding with increased dexterity/professionalism to implement future, larger scale delivery.

The TOC will consider IP against a series of targets, informing actionable change:

- 10+ Brazilian women participants exposed to Verbatim Formula
- 10-min docu-short released online with measured interactions on project webspace
- 3 new arts practitioners associated with IP
- FLEX & LAWRS report in re: positive client interactions/interventions with project
- Participants demonstrate positive experience beyond project end; reported via continuing partner support
- Minimum of 300 from diaspora audiences across London attending the Premiere.

The resulting TOC doc will be shared with partners to ensure a continuing & improved collaborative approach for future delivery. The TOC will:

- Examine the impact of the Verbatim method on GLOs & GSOs
- Explain the process of change for future participants by outlining causal links in intervention/ interaction/ outcomes
- Articulate identifiable impact on GSO/GLO outcomes for future large-scale project delivery.

Developing People

If you plan to develop you/your organisation's skills and knowledge, tell us about it here:

Technology and Data

If you are using technology and/or data and evidence to deliver and develop your project and assess its impact, tell us about it here:

Giving us a sense of your work: Attachment

If you would like to include a document or web link to give us a sense of your work you can do it here.

For example, this could be an image, a music file, a sample of your writing, a video, a link to an online portfolio or a review of your work.

You can only attach one (either a web link or a document). Your document can be up to 10MB and we accept PDF, MS Word, MS Excel, MS PowerPoint and JPEG files. If you'd like to send us a video or a sound clip, it's best to use a link.

If we have asked you for any mandatory attachments (for example, a permission letter) you should attach these at the end of the application.

Data Protection and Freedom of Information

We are committed to being as open as possible. This includes being clear about how we assess and make decisions on Arts Council National Lottery Project Grants and how we will use your application form and other documents you give us. We are happy to provide you with copies of the information we hold about you.

We handle any personal data we receive in accordance with the United Kingdom General Data Protection Regulation, the UK Data Protection Act 2018 and other applicable laws that regulate the use and privacy of personal data (Data Protection Law). For more information about the personal data that we collect, what we use it for, and your data protection rights, please refer to our Privacy Notice.

As a public organisation we also have to follow the Freedom of Information Act 2000.

You must read the Freedom of Information (FOI) guidance on our website (<https://www.artscouncil.org.uk/freedom-information#section-6>) before you sign your application.

By signing this application form, you acknowledge the following:

1. That we will use this application form and the information you give to us, including any personal data as referred to in our Privacy Notice, for the following purposes:
 - a) To decide whether to give you a grant.
 - b) To provide copies to other individuals or organisations who are helping us assess and monitor grants, including local authorities, other lottery distributors and organisations that award grants. After we reach a decision, we may also tell them the outcome of your application and, if appropriate, why we did not offer you a grant.
 - c) To hold in our database and use for statistical purposes.
 - d) If we offer you a grant, we will publish information about you relating to the activity we have funded, including the amount of the grant and the activity it was for. This information may appear in our press releases, in our print and online publications, and in the publications or websites of the Department for Digital, Culture, Media and Sport (DCMS) and any partner organisations who have funded the activity with us.
 - e) If we offer you a grant, you will support our work to campaign for arts and culture, contributing (when asked) to important publicity activities during the period we provide funding for. You will also give us, when asked, case studies, images and audio-visual materials that we can use to celebrate artistic and cultural excellence.
 - f) As an organisation that gives out public funds, we may carry out checks on the personal and financial information you provide us. If you provide false, fraudulent or inaccurate information in your application or at any point in the lifetime of any funding agreement we enter into with you, we may share the information about you with other National Lottery distribution bodies and relevant external bodies to prevent fraud and money laundering. If we identify or suspect fraudulent activity we will report this to the police and take appropriate action.

I confirm that, as far as I know, the information in this application is true and correct.

4. Subsidy Control

The Subsidy Control rules are the new legal requirements that apply to the award of subsidies in the United Kingdom with effect from 11pm 31 December 2020. They have largely replaced EU State aid rules.

Where a "Subsidy" is present as per the definition of subsidy set out in the Subsidy Control Act 2022 ("the Act") then it is necessary for the award to comply with requirements set out in the Trade and Cooperation Agreement with the EU (and in due course those further requirements set out in the Act).

A "Subsidy" only exists when the following cumulative characteristics are present (only tick those that apply):

- financial assistance which is given, directly or indirectly, from public resources by a public authority; and
- confers an economic advantage on one or more enterprises; and
- is specific, that is, is such that it benefits one or more enterprises over one or more other enterprises with respect to the production of goods or the provision of services; and

- has, or is capable of having, an effect on —
 - (i) competition or investment within the United Kingdom,
 - (ii) trade between the United Kingdom and a country or territory outside the United Kingdom, or
 - (iii) investment as between the United Kingdom and a country or territory outside the United Kingdom.

If awarded, do you believe that your request for public funding meets all the necessary criteria to be classed as a "Subsidy"? No

Where a "Subsidy" is declared you will be required to provide further information to establish whether the "Subsidy" would be considered lawful.

5. Tick the relevant box if any person involved in the project or writing the application:

I am happy to be contacted by Arts Council England, or by a third-party organisation on behalf of Arts Council England, for feedback to help evaluate the programme.

Constitution

1. Name

The name of this organization shall be Migrants in Action, hereafter referred to as MinA.

2. Not for profit

The organization is not established or conducted for private gain; any surplus or assets are used principally for the benefit of the community.

3. Mission, Aims & Values

3.1 Our mission is:

to use theatre as a vehicle to promote the wellbeing of women from Global South countries of Portuguese language, who experienced gender-based violence in London and/or traumas due to the migration process.

3.2. We aim to:

- Use theatre to bring stories to wide mainstream audience.
- Promote recreational activities, mutual support and joint aid among our members.
- Foster understanding about positive and equal relationships amongst the community.
- Raise awareness of gender-based violence against this specific group.

3.3. Values

Our values are simple but we believe to be crucial to our success and they are to:

- Create a non-hierarchical, non-judgmental, supportive and positive environment for our members.
- Welcome women of all age, race, class, political views and religion.
- Treat other community members with the same high standards one expect to receive and to be honest, courteous, and approachable.

4. Objects

The objects of the organization are to carry on theatre and other forms of art activities that benefit the community.

5. Powers

To further its objects, organization's members may do all such lawful things, in particular, but without limitation, may raise and secure the payment of money for its purpose.

6. Equal Opportunities

In light of the nature of work and focus of MinA and in accordance with Paragraph 1, Schedule 16, of the Equality Act 2010; the organization considers the member's race and gender, and does not contravene section 101(1) by restricting membership to persons who share a protected characteristic.

Paragraph 1 so far as relating to race does not apply in relation to colour.

7. Members

7.1 MinA is an organization run by and for minoritised women and membership is open to anyone who:

- Identify as woman
- Is aged 20+
- Is from Global South countries of Portuguese language such as Brazil, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique, Angola, Cape Verde & São Tomé and Príncipe.

- Immigrated to the UK
- Lives in London or the surrounding areas

7.2 Due to the nature of the organization, MinA saves the right to communicate verbally and in writing with members in Portuguese language at first place. Materials and documents will then be translated into English.

7.3 MinA was created by a group of Brazilian women living and working in London. As for this reason, MinA saves the right to work not exclusively, but majority with and for the Brazilian community.

8. Membership

Members are structured in two groups: Artists Committee and Beneficiaries.

8.1 Artist Committee

The Artistic Director and Associates form the Artist Committee. Each member is responsible for a specific area such as Arts Facilitation, Communications, Community work, and Project Management.

The Artist Committee is responsible for: applying for funding, facilitating workshops, overseeing the development of the project, liaising with partners, providing a safe environment for beneficiaries, and general decision-making.

8.2 Beneficiaries

Beneficiaries are the participants who workshops are tailored and delivered to.

Beneficiaries can join if:

- Referred by social services, local authorities or charities
- Self referral
- Beneficiaries can join the Artists Committee if she/they wish to and decision is subjected to committee's approval.

9. Becoming and Ceasing to be a Member

The subscribers to the Constitution are the first members of the organization.

9.1 Becoming a member

9.1.1 A person who is willing to become a committee member is nominated by others or may put own name forward. If a person nominates for a position on the committee and is unchallenged (no other nominations) there is no need for a ballot. But if two or more persons put themselves forward for the same position, then a ballot is taken and the person receiving the highest number of votes is declared the winner and takes the position.

9.1.2 Beneficiaries who want to become a member shall submit an online application to the organization, containing personal information and reasons why she wishes to join the project. Beneficiaries must commit to the length of the project and agree with terms and conditions.

9.2 Ceasing membership

9.2.1 Artists Committee's members must sign the termination of membership form.

9.2.2 Beneficiaries' membership is automatically terminated once the project is finished.

10. Artistic Director's general duties

Subject to the Articles, the Director is responsible for:

- Planning and implementation of strategic development, leading on identifying funding streams and setting up and maintaining administrative systems and process.
- Designing, developing and implementing organisation's artistic vision and focus and performance.
- Providing annual report and financial statement for the last fiscal year

11. Associates' reserve power

Associates to support Artistic Director and may, by special resolution, direct the Artistic Director to take, or refrain from taking, specific action.

12. Artistic Director to take decisions collectively

Any decision of the Artistic Director must be either a majority decision at a meeting or a decision taken in accordance with Article 14.

13. Calling a Artists Committee meeting

An Artists Committee meeting must be called by at least ten clear days' notice unless urgent circumstance requires shorter notice.

13.1 Every notice calling Artists Committee's meeting must specify the place, day and time of the meeting.

13.2 Notice of Artists Committee's meetings need not be in writing.

13.3 Notice of Artists Committee's meetings may be sent by electronic means to an address or number provided by each member.

14. Decisions without a meeting

If any actions need to be taken in a short period of time, any member of the Artists Committee must communicate and wait for the agreement of at least one other member by electronic means and in writing.

15. Communication & Decisions between Committee and Beneficiaries

15.1 Communication between Committee and Beneficiaries should be kept at a professional level and for the project's purpose only. Any relationship taken further might be on individual's responsibility, communicated to the committee and treated outside office and workshop space.

15.2 In accordance to this Article, decisions regarding place, day and time of workshops and meetings with beneficiaries should be taken electronically and in writing.

15.3 Any disclosure will be recorded and forwarded to the designated body of competence.

16. Privacy Policy & Data Protection

14.1 MinA will comply with the Data Protection Act 1998 & any other present or future statutory enactment or regulations relating to data protection or privacy.

14.2 All member's details & records are confidential & will not be released to any third party without the permission of the member unless it is required to be disclosed by law or regulation, or at the request of a governmental body, monetary or fiscal authority or independent auditors or legal counsel, & in the case of disclosure as a result of law or regulation.

14.3 MinA shall so far, as reasonably permitted by law or regulation, promptly informs a member of such disclosure.

17. Financial Matters

17.1 Members of Artists Committee work on a voluntary basis unless is entitled to remuneration for any other service she undertakes for the organization.

17.2 When granted funding, members will be paid in accordance to project's proposal and job role.

17.3 Beneficiaries have the right to claim for transport fees if needed, to go to and from workshops, rehearsals and meetings with members.

17.4 Funds may only be used for our stated purposes pursuant to this constitution.

17.5 No individual may benefit from funds through expenditure that is not in line with our purpose or through disproportionately high expenses.

17.6 MinA runs a current bank account specifically designed for receiving funding and donations and for paying for services that benefit the project.

17.7 the account is authorised by Carolina Cal Angrisani & Glaucia Elaine Orlandin, both members of the Artists Committee.

17.8 Signatories are Carolina Cal Angrisani & Glaucia Elaine Orlandin, both members of the Artists Committee.

17.9 signatories are unrelated by blood or marriage, nor in a long-term relationship or living together at the same address.

18. Amendments to the Constitution

18.1 Amendments to the Constitution can only be made at a meeting following Articles 13 and 14.

18.2 Any proposal to amend the constitution must be given to the Artistic Director in writing. The proposal must then be circulated with the notice of meeting.

19. Dissolution

19.1 If a meeting, by simple majority, decides that it is necessary to close down the group, it may call a Special General Meeting with all members to do so. The sole business of this meeting will be to dissolve the group.

19.2 If it is agreed to dissolve the group, all remaining money and other assets, once outstanding debts have been paid, will be donated to a charitable organization.

This constitution was agreed at the inaugural General meeting of MinA: Migrants in Action on 01.03.2019

1. Executive Summary

Background

This document reports on co-produced creative arts-based research conducted with Brazilian migrant women survivors in London, who have experienced direct and indirect forms of gender-based violence. Working with Migrants in Action (MinA), a community theatre organisation, this project sought to develop and deliver a series of experimental, co-produced and creative applied arts workshops and an audiovisual installation with Brazilian migrant women survivors in order to capture and illuminate Brazilian women's institutional and creative stories as a form of community healing and rights-claiming. In doing so, we also sought to evaluate whether and how engagement in this research might improve these women's wellbeing and to use these insights to inform a set of practical recommendations for policy and practice.

We outline the key findings of our work below and set out a number of recommendations for policy and practice.

Finding 1 - Initial findings from our evaluation survey, using The Warwick-Edinburgh Mental Wellbeing Scale, suggest creative, co-produced research interventions, such as ours, may improve overall mental wellbeing of participants. Using survey responses collected before and after the creative research intervention, we found a small aggregate increase in the wellbeing of the women who took part in the workshops. Acknowledging the limits of our sample size and of using normative, quantitative frameworks for understanding mental wellbeing, these initial results provide us with a useful starting point a) to conduct further research on the impact of co-produced creative research on participants and b) to advocate for the use of these methods in other contexts.

Finding 2 - Through our analysis of ethnographic observation data, we found that the theme of "belonging" is key to a deeper understanding of these Brazilian migrant women's isolation and susceptibility to violence, as well as participants' hope for liberation. Participants reported a sense of alienation and isolation, often linked to the hostile immigration environment, which added to their material conditions of marginality and difficulties in accessing support. At the same time, "belonging" was reported to have a negative side, especially in relation to feeling "suffocated" or "tangled" by one's identity, community, or wider experiences of intersectional discrimination.

Finding 3 - Offering migrant women survivors of violence a safe space that facilitates agency appears to be of benefit to psychosocial wellbeing. Participants suggested a safe space to be somewhere where they can trust the process and each other, speak their own language, share their own stories without being judged or questioned further, a space where they can take risks, learn and grow from other migrant women. Participants were enabled in taking control or agency over their histories and experiences - a consistent theme in accounts of how the workshops benefitted them. Participants reported variously on how the workshops provided different forms of agency, including creative, artistic, expressive forms of empowerment as well as a sense of social agency by strengthening connections with their peers.

Finding 4 - The question of race challenges simplistic understandings of the “migrant experience” and requires further explication. Participants noted an absence of engagement with race, specifically the experience and struggles of black women, in the original research, the re-interpretation of which formed the basis of these workshops. This important point provoked challenging conversations among participants who felt unrepresented by the research as well as among those for whom specific focus on racialised identity obscured their own particular experiences. The need for these kinds of difficult conversations in this work may challenge simplistic hopes to “enhance” wellbeing in the short-term, but also underlines the importance of generative conflict taking place within the boundaries of a safe space with trusted facilitators.

Recommendation 1 - Researchers seeking to undertake co-produced and creative research with marginalised groups should recognise the ethical and practical complexities of undertaking this work and should integrate ethics approvals, safeguarding resources, trauma informed approach and facilitation training to ensure the work can be both richly productive and carried out in a safe way.

Recommendation 2 - Both policymakers and researchers should recognise the value of co-produced, creative research interventions both as a relatively inexpensive means of ameliorating the lives of those who take part, but also as a source of a uniquely valuable evidence base with which to inform decision-making, in governmental and non-governmental contexts.

Recommendation 3 - Wholesale structural reform is needed to address the persistent and deep-rooted issues of patriarchy and sexism that underlie gender-based violence, together with wider racialised state and institutional violence that excludes migrant women survivors. Policymakers seeking to enact even incremental policy change to address gender-based violence need to work to address the issues of lack of trust in state institutions and social isolation among migrant women often associated with the hostile immigration environment.

2. Introduction

In England and Wales in 2020, 28% of women aged 16-74 had experienced domestic abuse; 7% had experienced actual or attempted sexual assault in the home (ONS, 2021). These figures refer only to reported violence and to that which occurs within the home. Rates are much higher when gender-based violence in general in private and public spheres are accounted for; 44% of women in the UK as a whole have experienced physical and/or sexual violence by a partner or non-partner since the age of 15 - higher than the EU average of 33% (EU Agency for Fundamental Rights 2014, 29).

These stark figures are often (but not always) higher for migrant women. It is important not to assume that migrants experience more gender-based violence because of inherent cultural differences. Instead, migrants' vulnerability is linked with a hostile immigration environment, racism, discrimination and exclusion. Insecure immigration status is a persistent challenge for migrant women survivors of gender-based violence as they are reluctant to report to state authorities as they fear deportation, losing their children or reprisals from perpetrators. In addition, they have 'No Recourse to Public Funds' (NRPF – where they are unable to access any state support) (McIlwaine, Granada and Valenzuela-Oblitas, 2019).

2.1 The experiences of Brazilian women in the UK

This report focuses on Brazilian migrant women in London, who form part of a wider Brazilian community in the city and beyond. The most recent reliable figures of the size of this population is based on the 2011 census, which suggests that, in the context of a Latin American population of approximately 250,000 in the UK - with 145,000 of them based in London, there were 52,000 Brazilians in the UK, with 60% based in London (McIlwaine and Bunge, 2016). The likelihood is that these are under-estimates due to the focus on the 2011 census and the fact that many Brazilians are unlikely to be included in the statistics. The only existing research on Brazilian women's experiences of gender-based violence, on which this current project is based (and from which it adapts its name - based on a collaboration with the Latin American Womens' Rights Service [LAWRS]), shows that 82% have experienced some form of violence during their lifetime, of which 70% was in the public sphere (based on a survey with 175 women). Within this, psychological violence for 48%, followed by physical (38%) and sexual (14%). Also important is that while 77% experienced violence before leaving Brazil, 52% who have suffered in Brazil, experience it again in London. In racial terms, those who identified as having mixed heritage were more likely to suffer (66%) than white women (58%) (two of the three Black women included in the survey experienced violence) (McIlwaine and Evans, 2018, 2022).

This research has been important in providing the first study of the incidence, nature and causes of gender-based violence among Brazilian migrants in the UK. However, this work did not re-engage with the women participants (for reasons of confidentiality) or seek to explore further how this group copes with such violence. It is essential for theoretical and practical reasons not to treat these women as passive victims. Instead, in this project, we sought to investigate how these women understand their experiences as survivors. How do they perceive the social, economic, or political conditions that underlie their experience of violence? And what strategies, solutions, or coping mechanisms do these women employ in response to violence?

Asking these questions is not only an important step in developing a deeper understanding of VAWG against Brazilian women in the UK by re-centring the voices and experiences of a marginalised, but not passive, group of women. They are also vital for the practical task of beginning to formulate a set of policy recommendations and practical guidance to Violence Against Women and Girls (VAWG) which is grounded in and responsive to the experience of these women.

Yet, the scale of this task cannot be understated - as is attested by the statistics already cited above. Addressing the problem of gender-based violence internationally and in local contexts, requires deep structural reform to overturn profound and historically persistent intersectional misogyny, racism, and xenophobia. These structural conditions are reinforced, in the UK, by the immigration regime - the so-called "hostile environment" - that actively militates against migrants, especially migrant women survivors. Indeed, this often creates another form of violence against such women when they are unable to access support because of active or passive infrastructural violence (McIlwaine and Evans, 2022).

In this context, therefore, a further set of questions arises with practical and methodological implications. What kinds of actions or interventions might have a reparative impact for these women? What forms of intervention can facilitate community healing? Is there a role for co-produced research, which seeks to re-centre the lived experience of migrant women, in supporting these aims? If so, what methods and methodologies might be appropriate to do this? And can creative, co-produced methods like these be wielded to have a practical impact on policy and practice?

These questions have been at the core of the work on which this report is based.

3. Background: the project

This project works directly with Brazilian migrant women survivors in London, who have experienced direct and indirect forms of gender-based violence, using innovative, co-produced creative arts-based research methods. Working with Migrants in Action (MinA), a community theatre organisation, it has addressed the following aims:

1. Develop experimental, co-produced and creative applied arts workshops and an audiovisual installation with Brazilian migrant women survivors, to capture and illuminate Brazilian women's institutional and creative stories as a form of community healing and rights-claiming
2. To understand whether and how engagement in this creative process might improve Brazilian migrant women's well-being, understood broadly
3. To produce a set of reflections and recommendations for practitioners, policymakers, and researchers based on the findings, with a specific focus on the role of creative engagements in influencing policy.

4. Research question(s)

1. Outcomes: In what way did a series of creative, collaborative arts-based workshops contribute to the individual and collective wellbeing of migrant women in the UK who have experienced gender-based violence?
 - a. Did this intervention appear to improve mental wellbeing? And, if so, in what ways and how?
 - b. Did this intervention affect these women's sense of creativity? And, if so, in what ways and how?
 - c. Did this intervention enhance or change this group's sense of community/collectivity/solidarity? And if so, in what ways?
2. Policy/Practice: What lessons can researchers, arts and community support practitioners, and policymakers with an interest in gender-based violence and/or and migrant women in the UK?
 - a. In the context of the current national and local policy landscape, can arts-based interventions like this provide an effective method for community organisations and policy makers to draw on, to improve the lives of migrant women with experience of gender-based violence?
 - b. What lessons can policy-makers specifically learn about the lives of migrant women with experience of gender-based violence that can inform current and future policy?
 - c. What lessons can practitioners learn about the development, delivery, and evaluation of creative arts-based workshops?
 - d. What can researchers learn about a) the value of creative research methods for engaging with marginalised groups and b) how these lessons apply to wider questions re: co-production, co-creativity, and expertise by experience, etc.?

4.1 Methods

This project is a multi-method investigation into the nature of gender-based violence among Brazilian women that used both participatory and creative research methods combined with qualitative evaluation methods to examine the impact, key themes, and emergent reflections for policy and practice.

The core activities consisted of ten applied drama workshops with 14 Brazilian women migrants to London with experience of gendered and intersectional violence as well as a workshop/premiere of the film installation. These were conducted mainly between September and November 2021 with an additional evaluation workshop in September 2022. These workshops entailed participants taking part in a series of collaborative and creative engagements with existing research into Violence Against Women and Girls conducted by Cathy McIlwaine with other collaborators including the Latin American Women's Rights Service (LAWRS). Specifically engaging with the project report 'We Can't Fight in the Dark' (McIlwaine and Evans, 2018) from which the current project adapted its name, these workshops included poetry, theatrical performance, song, video and audio art, and were facilitated by Carolina Cal Angrisani (artistic director of MinA), Nina Franco (visual artist), Alba Cabral (musician), Louise Carpenedo (videomaker) and Renata Pepl (Project Manager) (see Appendix 1). These workshops were evaluated through a combination of pre- and post-workshop surveys and a workshop exploring participants' mental wellbeing. In addition, ethnographic observations were undertaken during each of the workshops, which inform a qualitative discursive analysis of the key themes emerging.

It is also important to note that additional funding was secured following the completion of the workshops. These funded dissemination of the video installation by MinA participating at a range of festivals (Festival of Latin American Women in Arts - FLAWA; Migration Matters Festival, Sheffield), university events (Reading, Queen Mary University of London, Birkbeck, King's College London) including a visit to Rio de Janeiro in July 2022 where the installation was presented twice (at partners, Casa Rio and Casa das Mulheres da Mare). The majority of these events involved the staging/showing of the video installation coupled with a short performance by MinA participants. These performances also entailed a series of training and rehearsal sessions using 'Theatre of the Oppressed' (TO)¹ methodologies. The main reason for this was that the Artistic Director and the women themselves felt that viewing the video alone was an objectifying experience that did not reflect the co-produced, collective nature of the process as noted by one woman:

"When we watched the video with the audience and went straight to the Q&A, I felt like a subject of study, a guinea pig. But when we added the live performance, the acting, I felt much more comfortable; It felt that we were representing a collective, that story wasn't mine, it was everyone's."

1. Theatre of the Oppressed (TO) is an aesthetic method created by Brazilian playwright Augusto Boal that stimulates critical observation and representation of reality, envisioning the production of consciousness and concrete actions. In the last decades' Theatre of the Oppressed games, exercises and techniques have become powerful tools for many practitioners across the world. It is a participatory art form that is meant and applied as an empowering and liberating practice that inspires individual and collective transformation and searches to shift oppressive power structures.

5. Key findings

The following sections outline some analysis and reflections, based on survey responses and an analysis of the ethnographic material (notes, images, and video) collected during the workshops together with assessment of the material produced by the women in the workshops and analysis of the evaluation workshop. This report focuses specifically on “wellbeing”, understood as mental wellbeing or mental health, as well as psychosocial wellbeing. It is important to note that the sample sizes are small and so the conclusions drawn here are tentative, intended as the basis for further reflection and not conclusive in themselves.

Key Finding 1: participation in creative workshops appeared to have a positive effect on participants’ mental wellbeing

In order to investigate the impact of the creative workshops on participants’ mental wellbeing, participants were surveyed before and after the “intervention” using the Edinburgh-Warwick (EW) scale. In the absence of a large sample size or control groups, this data was used as an indicative means of understanding the general mental wellbeing of participants prior to the workshops and to investigate whether any changes could be detected. The assumption was that this would correlate with the activities of the creative workshops over that duration.

Prior to the workshops, surveys (n=14) indicated that the overall aggregate mental wellbeing of the group was generally considered relatively low, by the metrics of the EW scale. The average score for participants was 44, only 2 points above the cut-off point for “low wellbeing” and half of the survey respondents scored below 42, considered in the bottom 15% of the population, or “low wellbeing”. This is higher than the expected distribution for the population and, although with the small sample size it is difficult to attribute too much significance to this, this finding suggests that participants may have had slightly lower mental wellbeing than the average UK person.

Commenting on her expectations of the workshops prior to beginning, one participant noted that she wanted the following:

‘Take away from me the hurt from two whole years, using the arts, my own body expression; take away from my body everything that does not belong to me. Everything that comes from others and that I have been carrying like a heavy suitcase full of clothes that no longer fit me.’

The chance to heal and build self-esteem was viewed as very important by participants. One woman taking part in the workshops hoped the work could “help alleviate the traumas generated by domestic violence... little by little I am healing”. Another noted: “I find it very creative to have the opportunity to resignify the pain I experienced due to domestic violence and to be able to work on self-esteem for personal and collective strengthening”.

The post-workshop survey (n=8) showed an aggregate increase in the group’s EW score (48), which is within the average for the UK population, with only two participants scoring 42 or below. This indicates that after the workshops had taken place, participants reported slightly higher levels of mental wellbeing. But this change does not prove causation, only that there is a correlation for a small number of survey respondents between apparently improved overall mental wellbeing and participation in the creative workshops.

In reflecting on the value of the workshops, a participant noted:

“MinA was a unique experience; I expressed myself, participated, and spoke without fear, it was something that made me release my fears. I had never done theatre before, I was a bit shy, but every meeting was different: dancing, singing, writing poems, being able to express our emotions, something that helped me a lot and the other women too. Every meeting was an emotion. I cried, I rejoiced, I felt special”.

Key finding 2: the concept of “belonging” is key to understanding isolation and susceptibility to violence as a migrant, as well as participants’ hope for liberation

Analysis of ethnographic observer reports provides further qualitative insight into the mental wellbeing of participants. Where the EW scale provides us with a numerical indicator of mental wellbeing as a normative measure of health (i.e. as either “good” or “bad”), qualitative data can offer us a) potential insight into the origin of the participants’ mental wellbeing, its imbrication with social or psychosocial aspects of their experience and b) a more complex picture of the experience of the participants, absent of any explicit judgement as to whether it is positive or negative for mental health.

A key theme that emerged from the workshops was that of belonging and the complex way it contributes to the psychosocial wellbeing of participants. For participants, Brazilian women migrants in the UK, some with uncertain immigration status, isolation and alienation appeared to contribute to their vulnerability and susceptibility to violence of different kinds, as well as to mental suffering.

As one participant put it: “I’m in a limbo where I don’t know where I belong, when my skin and my flesh do not translate what I am (...) I do not belong there or here”.

This sense of not belonging either in the UK or at “home” also contributes to material vulnerability, regarding access to support, in particular for women living outside London: “Social isolation contributes a lot to this process [lack of access to support]. The worst feeling is for you to be at home and not to have a support network, you don’t have options. The women who live in the countryside will suffer and will have a huge difficulty to access support”.

However, “belonging” was reported to have a potentially negative side too, especially in relation to feeling “suffocated” or “tangled” by one’s identity, community, or wider experiences of intersectional discrimination.. Belonging ties together key issues of isolation and alienation for these Brazilian women migrants in the UK: both the practical and psychological importance of “belonging” as well as a desire to be liberated from certain constraints of living in a complex and potentially exclusionary environment created by state, institutional and infrastructural violence .

Belonging also emerged in the poetry written by the participants. The following is a collective poem.

I belong nowhere.
I am not welcome.
I don't belong here nor there.
I don't fit in.
Even though I try.
Fear.
I fear losing my children.
I fear revenge.
I fear deportation.
In between four walls, I shrink.
They have the power.

(created collectively by Brazilian migrant woman participants in We Still Fight in the Dark workshop)

This poem was written by one participant, again focusing on belonging:

I don't belong anywhere.
I no longer fear loneliness as I feared before,
time has taught me.
I don't belong here or there
I unlearn everything I am, what I was,
And I don't fit.

(created by a Brazilian migrant woman participant in We Still Fight in the Dark workshop)

Key finding 3: creative methods are useful in allowing participants to take on agency to reinterpret research material to co-produce their versions of their lived experiences in order to reach wider audiences

Creative methods can play a positive role in ameliorating the lives of those affected by a certain issue, by affording participants the opportunity to take on expressive or creative agency in relation to their lives, where other forms of social, legal, or economic agency may be absent. This project entailed the reinterpretation of an existing research report by those who had been the subject of it.

This raises two important issues. First, researchers must be open to the criticism of their work, as in the case of the limited attention paid to race in the original research (see key finding 4). Second, the interpretation using creative media speaks to different and wider audiences. For example, a participant in the workshop premiere of the video noted:

“I think that one thing that is important is that these projects help us create a bridge. And sometimes not many people who have access to it can understand, can actually translate it. Women that work the data, we are scared to gather this. But we took the data and actually are showing them to a different audience”.

In a similar way, another participant stated:

“Also, the data is just very abstract. You know, you’re meeting people who have lived this ... And then people are coming and sharing their own experiences because they’re part of this ... like humanising things.”

In workshops, participants engaged through theatre, poetry, and other media with a number of highly challenging issues raised by the research of McIlwaine. The implications of this were raised by the workshops’ ethnographic observer, who noted her concerns regarding the impact of acting out scenes relating to violence, victimhood, or trauma.

However, as the observer notes, in one case, the individual about whom they were most worried was able to recognize her own situation through theatre and, significantly, to see it “from the outside” – providing distance rather than traumatic proximity.

This sense of participants taking control or agency over their histories and experiences was consistent in accounts of how the workshops benefitted them.

“One of the participants said this was the first time she could hear herself singing out loud, it was the first time she could voice something. “I used to be afraid of speaking up”, she said. She then shared that she was happy.”

The observer notes that participants’ confidence appeared to improve when encouraged to bow and take ownership of their performance. While they also note how, despite a number of participants feeling ill on the day of one performance, and needing assistance, “they really made all the effort to be there, be present and to perform. They wanted to be in that video, they wanted to be seen, to tell their story and, by doing that, to tell the story of a community of women.” One of the women who was ill stated: “I remember on that day of the recording, I was very ill, because I had the flu, I had a fever, and I made a great effort to be there. My body said no, but my head said yes. And if I didn’t go, I would feel even worse than I did on that day.” Another participant noted of the process as a whole:

“The project, so far, has always been amazing not only to strengthen connections with people I already knew but also to bond with other women, listen to their stories, their pains and victories and celebrate this not easy life as an immigrant alongside Brazilian women so diverse and at the same time very similar in their challenges and struggles.”

This is reflected in this poem:

Where does your pain hurt?
Where is your deepest scar?
Give me your hand, hold my hand
And together, in sisterhood
We will walk side by side
To heal. To be

(created by a Brazilian migrant woman participant in We Still Fight in the Dark workshop)

In reflecting on the value of the video and its impact, another participant noted:

“My mom died when I was 9 and my father when I was 15. We don’t have a single picture of them, no image. There was a picture somewhere, which my uncle took from us and I simply have no image of my parents. Participating in this film gave me hope and joy. My image is there for everyone to see. I’m gonna be there on the screen forever for people to remember me.”

Key finding 4: Race emerged as a key theme in workshops, opening up new pathways for research, while provoking difficult conversations, which may challenge simplistic hopes to “enhance” wellbeing in the short-term

The complex issue of race emerged a number of times in workshops. For some participants, they felt that the experience of black women was not reflected in the research with which they engaged, and they used the opportunity of the workshops to express their identity and visibility. Specifically, they criticised where the research on VAWG referred to women of “mixed race” and the sense that it made black women invisible. In response, they exclaimed: “‘I exist. Black woman’”.² One participant noted in the workshop premiere of the video the following:

“I think it’s important to talk about the invisibility of black women. This statistic is not in the projects, and it took black women involved in the project to stand up and say: ‘Wait a minute, but where are we here? And that’s when the second part of the video came up which was ‘They (the research) are not talking about us’. So Brazilian women, we are not just one type of woman; there are black women, indigenous women, white women. So it is important that we don’t put all of us in the same pot, because it is not the same experience.”

This testimony underscores the importance of being sensitive to race in this context, and more generally on identity as intersectional, in order to avoid reproducing a simplistic and reductive conception of a notionally homogenous national community, and the erasure of black experience.

Another participant raised the question of race with regards identity and belonging. The ethnographic observer noted: “She commented on the struggles of black women including the struggle to accept her appearance, her skin, her identity, her hair. She said how some mothers and grandmothers would cut their child’s hair short so it wouldn’t show what kind of hair the child had, as if trying to hide their black identity in an attempt to prevent them from suffering further discrimination.”

The effect of research that disregards the specific experiences of black women, this suggests, may be to reproduce the subjective and social experience of “invisibility”. This highlights the importance of being sensitive to the question of race in future research in this area.

2. It is worth noting that the research identified the racial characteristics of Brazilian women according to the census typology. Only 3 women self-identified as ‘Black’ in the survey (McIlwaine and Evans, 2018). Many more women identifying as Black were included in the in-depth interviews as discussed in subsequent analysis (McIlwaine and Evans, 2022). However, the participants were completely correct to note that race was not given enough prominence in the research report.

This text was written and performed by the Black Brazilian women in the group as a way to challenge the ‘mixed race’ term used in the research and the racial democracy idea of ‘we are all Brazilians’.

We meet in the desire of affection, in the desire to break through the pain.
We mismatch in the lack of empathy, in the privileges, of colour.
I exist, Black!
We meet as migrant women
We mismatch in the right to immigrate.
We had our history burned and with that our right to come and go was denied.

We don’t know our history and we don’t even have European ancestry.
(excerpt from video script)

However, at the same time as some women articulated these concerns, other participants seemed to feel ambivalent about these questions. One participant noted how she felt “unrepresented” in material concerning black women specifically, pointing out the importance of producing instead “texts that represent everyone”. This caused significant disagreement, with participants entering into a debate around representation, universality, and unconscious racism.

This debate seems to have caused some distress and upset among participants, perhaps calling into question the workshops’ aims to enhance the wellbeing of this group. However, such disagreement could also be understood in a positive light - as a form of generative conflict against a backdrop of shared experience. Moreover, this exchange raises the complexity of this question and the need for future research to actively engage with its subjects and deal with these issues in consultation with those it affects.

6. Reflecting back: summary reflections from the participants

After a year of engagement with We Still Fight in the Dark, the participants reflected on the process from a range of different perspectives. While pain clearly emerges as a central aspect, sharing, self-awareness and self-knowledge are also important. The women elaborated on this in relation to how their life stories had changed, the majority of which were positive and revolved around increased self-belief. One woman spoke about her enhanced self-awareness and self-knowledge:

“I’ve learned to look more clearly into my own life stories and without judging or blaming myself but recognising my strengths and the obstacles from the past that insisted in leaving marks in the present”

Self-confidence was key for another participant:

“It has helped me a lot because I was attending counselling but was insecure and afraid of speaking in public. Our meetings were a different experience, they have helped with my confidence: today I am a woman who can express my feelings.”

The process was transformative for several of the women in relation to the visual effect of seeing themselves in the video in relation to challenging their self-image and coming to terms with it:

“I’ve learnt how to use my image to call people for action and transform them. To see myself on the screen was very empowering, it made me proud and in a ‘shock’ I’ve learnt to accept myself”.

This was not always comfortable evoking painful memories, but it made some of the women feel stronger:

“To see myself in the video was something very different and challenging at the same time. I didn’t expect this to bring past memories but I believe it was important and needed to make me stronger. I could express myself”.

In considering the effect of the video on the women, pain, pride and strength were the overarching feelings.

“The red yarn and what it represents made me reflect, look back and realise all I went through. But it also helped me to recognise where I am today and feel proud of it”.

“That phrase: Oh, Brazilian ... (in the beginning of the video) has triggered me so much, brought so many bad memories. Especially in the part we mention ‘fear of losing my children, that really hit me hard. But I now understand that I had to go through this (MinA) process to heal and feel stronger”.

There was also a sense of the pain being shared in a collective manner: “we are bearers of pain and collective reflection”. This was explored in relation to how the women felt about sharing their stories with an audience. Generally, this was perceived as being positive because of the collective protection they felt: “To share my story with the audience wasn’t intimidating because the collective voice protects us and makes us stronger”. Some of the women felt safe and also stronger about the sharing process which was based on the trust that was developed in the group:

“I don’t feel like telling my own personal story but our stories, and because of that I feel safe. This is powerful because by telling our stories, as a group, it feels like we are shouting and making our struggles louder and visible”.

Some of the women spoke of making peace with their own experiences and of opening people’s minds. They felt like they were engaging with the audience, especially when the video was accompanied by a performance:

“In the beginning I felt exposed but as the performance went on, and people related with our lines/stories, I could sense a shift. From being the subject of study we were then ‘humanised’ and then I felt at the same level as the audience - from strangeness to recognition”.

In terms of how the project has affected their lives, the creative dimension was identified as being crucially important in improving their well-being and bringing about wider awareness of Brazilian migrant women’s lives, especially in terms of race:

“Talking about the experience of Black women in the group and performing them in the video, was very important and enriching for our process and discussion for very much needed structural changes”.

Occupying spaces such as rooms in King’s College London which the women tended to view as privileged emerged as very important, contributing to women’s self-worth”.

“I felt so proud and part of an amazing collective effort. I come from a very small town in Brazil and being here, part of this group and supported by Kings College, makes me feel that I’ve achieved something that not many have the chance to”.

This section provides some reflections for policymakers, practitioners, or researchers seeking either to work with similar groups to this project (migrants, survivors of VAWG) on similar issues, or using similar kinds of creative/co-productive research methods.

- Co-production is essential in order to fully explore, interpret and communicate the lived experiences of research subjects especially when exploring complex social issues. They need to own the data as a form of agency and awareness raising. Researchers should be open to employing such approaches to challenge and explore their models/theoretical framework/empirical findings.
- Co-production is ethically and practically complex, from an institutional ethics perspective, and the “medical model” of ethics is not always well-suited to projects involving potentially vulnerable people taking part in research, even with trusted partners. Researchers should integrate extra time for ethics approval into project plans. More broadly, ethics processes should support collaborative, co-produced modes of research.
- Experimental and creative methods should be integrated with evaluation, observation, and recording where possible and ethical, a) to allow for robust assessment of the impact of the work and b) to provide other researchers with data on what works and further develop these areas of practice and research methodology.
- Practitioners working on complex issues such as gender-based violence migration, racism, or other challenging areas should be prepared and trained for complex and challenging conversations and should be able to provide support or signposting to support where possible, should participants require it.
- Creative methods are valuable in communicating to policymakers the lived realities of research subjects. They can portray the key issues more effectively than the written text.

8. Key lessons for policy and policymakers in relation to VAWG and migration

Social and geographical isolation is a key factor in some migrant women's vulnerability, especially with regards their access to support. Providing safe, trusted spaces for women migrants to convene - without risk of further violence - is key not only for facilitating community healing and solidarity, but as a platform for knowledge exchange, practical support, and a social safety net. Policymakers should be aware of how social geography impinges on access to key services and can deepen exclusion.

Lack of trust in state institutions such as the police exacerbates the already precarious position of women migrants with experience of VAWG. State agencies should take this issue seriously and seek to rebuild trust in order to ensure women migrants feel able to access what support services are available. This includes, for example, access to vaccines, the take-up of which is correlated with levels of trust in the NHS.

Community groups, art groups, and other non-governmental forms of social support or community resources should be supported through funding but enabled to remain independent. Such trusted organisations can provide highly effective, inexpensive and targeted support through community experts in vulnerable communities in contrast with expensive and ineffective centralised state services.

Co-produced, collective creative engagements are extremely useful in capturing the existing knowledge, experience, and ingenuity of women migrants. This kind of research has the twofold benefit of potentially enhancing their well-being and providing these women with important forms of social and cultural agency, as well as ensuring research and policy-formulation is informed by "grassroots" expertise.

It is appropriate to conclude with an excerpt from the script that highlights how this type of co-produced, creative approach can not only improve well-being but challenge wider societal racism and intersectional discrimination.

I am a Brazilian woman
because they think I am exotic because my body is sexualized.

I am a Brazilian woman because they think I am not capable or intelligent or an intellectual because they say I am 'too much', too loud.
because they think I am stupid just because I am learning English.
I am a Brazilian woman and they say I can't dream.

9. Appendix 1: Outline of the workshops

Workshop 1: 09.09.21

We can't fight in the dark (Online)

Led by Carolina Cal

To introduce the project, research and participants.

Workshop 2: 16.09.21

Turning pain into art (Online)

Led by Nina Franco

To present and analyse artwork of women who used their experience of violence to create art.

Workshop 3: 23.09.21

This is my Story (at Embassy of Brazil)

Led by Carolina Cal

Methodology: Theatre of the oppressed

To use theatre as medium and red yarn as an inanimate object to create images and scenes from research data and analysis.

Workshop 4: 30.09.21

Being a migrant woman (online)

Led by Carolina Cal

Methodology: Creative writing

To develop a collective narrative of migration and womanhood.

Workshop 5: 07.10.21

Intersectionality (online)

Led by Nina Franco

To use the term intersectionality to better understand the inequalities and layers of oppression and discrimination that exist in our society/ community. It can be considered an important tool for thinking about the social relations of race, sex and class, and the challenges for the adoption of effective public policies.
